The quantity of blood that can be lost without jeopardy to life probably varies somewhat in different animals. Fredericq found that in dogs recovery easily occurred after a loss of blood amounting to 2 or 3 per cent. of the body-weight, whereas the loss of 4.5 per cent., or more than one-half the total bulk of the blood in the body, was usually followed by death. While, for obvious reasons, it is not definitely known to how great an extent the human being can lose blood and still recover, the estimate of 3 per cent. of the body-weight may be considered as approximately correct, although probably a greater amount of blood can be spared when transfusion or saline infusion is practised. Removal of Poisons Uremia.--The best example of systemic poisoning in which bleeding may be indicated is uremia. While it would seem that a comparatively small amount of poison could be removed with the blood obtained by venesection, there is no other way by which we can hope so promptly to diminish, at least to some extent, the quantity of the poison circulating in the body. When the dose of poison is overwhelming, the quantity removed with the blood obtained by venesection is, of course, not large in proportion to that remaining behind; nevertheless, it is to be borne in mind that, ordinarily, a case of marked uremia is seen...
